

Hello My Friends!

Helping couples design their perfect wedding day is what I am HERE for. I will help you create timelines for all the intimate details of your day.

I have written several guidebooks on how to elope in the wild sustainably, to what your dream day could look like getting married with no venue at all.

I am constantly looking for new and unique ways to help make weddings and elopements both easy and fun while celebrating your day with the most intention behind your day.

If you are a couple looking for someone to showcase and capture your day from beginning to end with the most amount of care, you've found the right person.

Whether its just the two of you or you've invited a few special people to join you. I want your ceremony day to be fully focused on what's important to you.

There is no right or wrong on how you chose to spend your day, but I'm here to give you permission to DO YOU! Not how anyone else wants you to celebrate, only how you envision this day.

I can't wait to get to know you better and I promise to be your hype girl and friend through this entire process.

Let's get started!

Dream Big My Friends,

xx Lindsey

Engagement Portraits

First Things First

I'll location scout and plan a session to fit each unique situation. To make sure everyone is comfortable with being in front of the camera and allow time for little breaks in between, I'd like to recommend my hour and a half session. No one can smile for that long and it's hard to get everyone comfortable in photos right out the gate... this is a great option. If you're more comfortable in front of the camera and know exactly what you're looking for in style, I've got you covered for that too. Both options are available for Early Morning or Sunset sessions. If you have something special in mind, I'm all ears! Prices always subject to change.

Let's Get to Planning!

Your Day, Your Rules.

How Much Coverage is Enough?

When planning out the timeline for your elopement day (or days), you might be wondering, how much of it should you have documented by me?

Want my honest opinion? Well here it is:

Your day deserves just as much documentation as anyone else getting married—and maybe even more.

3 Reasons Why.

1. While sometimes people think a wedding is just saying your vows and spending an hour or two taking portraits—the day you get married is so much more than that. Your wedding day is going to be the day you remember every year on your anniversary for the rest of your life together—and everything that happened that day from sun up to sun down is a part of your experience. Couples having big weddings get the entire story of their day document, so why shouldn't you?
2. If you're spending all of this time intentionally planning the absolute best, most authentic experience for you and your partner—don't you want to be able to relive all of it and remember it precisely, in full-color detail?
3. If you're not having as many people attend your event in-person, the photos of your day are truly the only way to share your experience with others—don't you want to be able to do that?

I honestly have never photographed a wedding that I thought the couple had me there for too long—but there have been countless days that I wish I could have documented a fuller picture of how awesome their entire experience was.

So when deciding how much of your day to have me along for—remember that just because I'm there doesn't mean that it's going to feel like an all-day photoshoot. I'm there to melt into the background, to make sure you have the best experience possible, and to just document you two having the time of your life.
